Meanwhile, Naruto and his new fellow ninja decided to form a How To Spot An APT Attack One of the greatest threats that we face on a daily basis is the threat of hackers, and in particular, Advanced Persistent Threats (APTs). APTs are becoming ever more prevalent and cunning in their ways of attack, and they can really cause damage. So, how do you spot an APT attack, and is it possible to stop an APT before it gets too far? The first thing to look at is your systems logs. A common reason for an APT is to access your system's file system, and the easiest way of doing this is to insert an exploit into a vulnerable piece of software. In fact, the toolset that an APT uses, and particularly the Trojan itself, can often be identified from the log files generated by the various system functions. Trojan related log files often include something like this: Trojan Command: Trojan Command: Beware though – identifying this as a Trojan is not enough, as APTs can be quite cunning and use quite a number of tricks to disguise their actions and their true intent. They can often be identified by the malicious command and control (C&C) server that they use to communicate with the machine they have compromised. In most cases, these will be compromised machines that have been used for the AP

Is it possible to change the type of a property of a Subscription? E.g. change it from Subscription to Subscription My goal here is to return an Observable from a method which returns Observable. I have 2 streams that I merge into one using a Window, so the typical solution does not work. A: You can use toObservable (Subscriber toObservable(Subscriber downstream)) to get what you want. The Downstream downstream is very important here. Officials of the U.S. Department of Justice on Monday announced indictments of two powerful Russian hackers on hacking charges. The suspects are agents of the Russian Federal Security Service (FSB) and the Main Directorate for the Reconnaissance of the Special Communication Methods of the General Staff of the Russian Armed Forces. The Department of Justice claims the FSB and GRU used the online personas "Guccifer 2.0" and "Peace," and a Guccifer 2.0 Twitter account to disseminate stolen documents, including private communications, of former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, her campaign chairman John Podesta and others, according to the DOJ's announcement. The DOJ named the suspects as Alexsey Belan and Aleksey Leonkov. They
